E-safety Update

Friday 21st October 2022

Child Exploitation and Online Protection (CEOP) website

The new CEOP website has been designed for children to visit at home with their Parents/Carers and features characters and messages from Jessie and Friends. The website gives children opportunities to complete tasks and collect badges when they help the characters complete online safety activities.

There is also an excellent Parent/Carers guide

Help your child stay safe on chat apps

The NSPCC have published safety guides on chat apps.

Chat apps allow users to send messages, videos, photographs and documents to individuals or groups of people. Personal safety settings should always be used to help ensure children only receive messages from people they know and trust and messages from strangers are automatically blocked. Reassuring children they can talk with you if they feel they may have had a risky conversation is to be recommended.

If you're worried about something a child or young person may have experienced online, you can contact the NSPCC helpline for free support and advice. Call 0808 800 5000 or contact NSPCC online
